Since 1990 the Cuckoo Trail has been a leisure route used by walkers, cyclists and horse riders. It is extremely popular and is mainly off-road so is suitable for people of all ages and abilities.

History
The Cuckoo Trail is owned by Wealden District Council and East Sussex County Council but this ‘cyclepathway’ was not originally built for this purpose.

Opened in 1880, the Cuckoo Line was the Polegate to Eridge railway, carrying milk, livestock and animal feed as well as passengers. It was named the Cuckoo Line after the tradition that the first cuckoo of spring was heard at Heathfield Fair. Although it was a busy line it eventually closed due to the cuts made by Dr Beeching in 1968.

The Cuckoo Trail is 11 miles long joining three of the district’s towns, Heathfield, Hailsham and Polegate. It also passes through the villages of Horam and Hellingly. The Trail has an extension to the south of Polegate which joins Hampden Park in Eastbourne forming part of the National Cycle Network (NCN) Route 21.

Key to symbols
The symbols on each page show which facilities are available in the towns and villages on the Trail.
The market town of Heathfield stands on one of the main ridges of the High Weald in an Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty. Surrounded by beautiful, rolling Sussex countryside there are magnificent views to the south from the High Street.

Heathfield gained its market charter in 1316. Later development of the area took place with the growth of the iron industry in the 16th and 17th centuries, and then with the coming of the railway in the 19th century. Old Heathfield was the original location of the settlement. At nearby Cade Street are the Heathfield Beacon and the memorial to Jack Cade, who, in 1450, led an insurrection of the common people and was reputedly killed near where the memorial is sited.

Natural gas was discovered in 1896 near Heathfield Railway station by some engineers who were actually looking for water.

Jonathan Harmer (1762-1849) was a talented stonemason and sculptor whose family lived in Heathfield. He started making ornamental bas-relief terracotta memorial plaques from local red clay at the beginning of the 19th century for people who couldn’t afford expensive headstones. Fine examples of these headstones can be found at Heathfield and many other local churchyards.

Events/Attractions

Le Marche is a lively street market. There are both French and English stall holders and colourful street entertainers. Le Marche is held on August Bank Holiday Monday each year. There is safe parking for bicycles on the day.

Le Tour de Wealden This annual summer cycling event takes place in aid of charity. There are three routes to suit all abilities and ages and everyone is welcome to take part.

Cuckoo Fair The annual April Hellie (Heathfield) Cuckoo Fair was traditionally held on the 15th April. An old lady would always appear to release from her basket the first cuckoo of spring and this has been re-enacted in later years.

Heathfield is an ideal touring base with a good range of general and specialist shops and other services. It still retains its links with the farming industry, which has shaped the surrounding countryside over the centuries.

The Millennium Green is linked to the Cuckoo Trail via a signposted route through the 240 metre Heathfield Tunnel. It is situated north of the tunnel behind the Co-Op supermarket. You are welcome to use the picnic tables and barbecues, explore the woodland and old railway track or just relax and enjoy the peaceful scenery. The glades and feature areas have accessible surfaces.

Heathfield farmers market A wonderful opportunity to buy fresh, locally produced products; the farmers market is held on the third Saturday of every month, 9.00am-1.00pm, at the Co-Op car park.

Heathfield Show Held on the second May Bank Holiday weekend (Saturday), this annual agricultural show makes a wonderful family day out. With demonstrations, horse events, farming competitions, crafts and local produce on display throughout the day.

For more information on these events contact the Sussex Country Information Centre on 01323 442667.
Hellingly is a small, attractive village, famous for its unusual churchyard.

The church of St Peter & St Paul has a rare circular churchyard of Saxon origin, known as a cric. Standing seven feet above the encircling houses, it is held in place by tall brick walls and criss-crossed by brick paths laid by unemployed labourers in 1824. The circular form of the burial ground is believed to represent the Celtic symbol of immortality and was raised above ground level to keep the dead dry.

The church itself was built in about 1190 and has a good early English chancel and north transept. There is a splendid gilded organ in the western gallery. Three well-preserved Harmer terracotta plaques can be found in the churchyard (see Heathfield).

Horselunges Manor (a private dwelling) can be found a couple of hundred yards from the Cuckoo Trail. This magnificently timbered, moated Manor house was built around 1475 on a much older site and restored in 1925. The odd name probably comes from two 14th-century owners – Herst and Lyngyver.

Look out for Hellingly Station, now a private dwelling next to the Trail. It still has ornate plasterwork, canopy fretwork and stained glass windows. A branch line once ran from here to Hellingly Hospital.

Arboretum
Sited opposite the old railway station, the Arboretum was initiated by the Parish Council to mark the Millennium. The award-winning project is managed and maintained by its Friends, a local community group. Planting was completed in 2002 at a Golden Jubilee celebration.

Watermill
(private dwelling) To the west of the Cuckoo Trail where the path crosses Mill Lane is a recently-restored watermill on an ancient site, here since at least 1255 when it was owned by Battle Abbey.

Horam
Horam was originally a small hamlet which grew due to the opening of the Cuckoo Line in 1880.

The landscape is formed by streams which have carved valleys, by trees and hedgerows, and by narrow winding lanes.

The large deposits of Wadhurst Clay, formed about 130 million years ago, influence the kind of farming which is carried on today and have been exploited for brick manufacture at Wadhurst Green, Horam.

Horam has the dubious honour of being the first village in the area to be hit by bombs and doodlebugs during the Second World War.

Wild flowers
Look out for early purple orchids growing along the Trail between Horam and Hellingly in April and May. You will probably notice the smell of Ramsons (wild garlic) growing.

For more information on events and attractions, please contact the Sussex Country Information Centre on 0330 342667.

Hailsham was first granted its Market Charter in 1252 by Henry III, so it could hold its own cattle market which spread out from Market Square.

Many historic buildings can be found in Hailsham, the present shopping centre is in scale with the Georgian buildings of the High Street. Close to the town centre visitors will easily find St Mary’s church, with an important perpendicular tower built in chequers of flint and squared stone, and dating from the 15th century. Not far from the church visitors will find several of the oldest buildings including the Pavilion Cinema and the Hailsham Heritage Centre. See opposite for more information.

The Fleur de Lys
Originally an inn on Market Street it dates from 1540 and has had a varied history as a Poor House c.1870, a butchers, sweet shop and Post Office. Nowadays, it makes a fine setting for the Town Council Offices. During the reign of Elizabeth I coaches from London had their terminus here.

Common Pond
Originally a dammed stream to make carp ponds for the Manor House. It was also used for cooling of metal in the casting of bells. The pond and Hailsham Common were enclosed in 1855 and in 1922 the pond was bought by the Town Council, upkeep and improvements have been made to this in recent years. You will pass the pond whilst cycling or walking the Trail.

The largest industry in the area is still agriculture, though other industries have existed in the past. Rope making and cattle feed mills, formerly important, have virtually disappeared.

Hailsham has a good range of services including supermarkets, pubs and tearooms.

Polegate

Polegate’s importance in modern times stems from its railway junction. Even today its rail links are important with its fast trains to Gatwick and Victoria. Polegate has an abundance of unspoilt countryside on its doorstep and would keep the dedicated walker going for many days. There are delightful walks through wooded countryside between Hailsham and the Cuckmere Valley and many varied views from the numerous walks on the Sussex Downs.

Near Polegate are the pretty hamlets of Wannock and Otham where there are remains of a priory founded in the late 12th century. Wilmington village is only a few miles from Polegate where the Long Man of Wilmington is cut into the chalk of the Downs.

Near Polegate is Filching Manor, a fine timber-framed building dating from the 15th century. This is also the home of a motor museum and a go-kart track for enthusiasts. Polegate Windmill Polegate Tower Mill was built in 1817 for local farmer and landowner Joseph Seymour. The mill is now owned by the Eastbourne Civic Society, but much of the fundraising is carried out by the Friends of Polegate Windmill.

Along this part of the Trail look out for birds and waterfowl which are attracted to Shinewater Marsh all year round.

Hampden Park has a range of shops and services as well as the train station.

To the south of Hampden Park is Eastbourne, perhaps the most aristocratic of the Sussex resorts with its air of Victorian opulence. The promenade and flower gardens between the bandstand and the pier are worth a visit as is the award-winning marina. Eastbourne has theatres, cinemas, museums, an art gallery, and a fine shopping centre, including the undercover Arndale Centre.

The Cuckoo Trail provides a wildlife corridor through a rich and varied landscape, from the High Weald, down the Cuckmere Valley and into the fringes of the Pevensey Levels. Conservation of wildlife is one of the aims of the Cuckoo Trail.

Cuckoo A summer visitor. Listen for the distinctive call from April to June. Lays its eggs in the nests of birds of other species (mainly Dunnock in this area). The young Cuckoo ejects the hosts' own eggs and demands all the food from the unwitting parents. It is grey with a long tail, usually solitary and flying with shallow wing beats.

Dunnock Like a sparrow but not a sparrow! Commonly seen hopping about on or near the ground along the Trail. Grey-brown with darker stripes on its back and a narrow beak. The Dunnock sings a rolling, warbling song from an exposed perch. It nests in dense cover such as thorn bushes and may unwittingly play host to a Cuckoo.

Orange Tip The Orange Tip butterfly starts life as a bright orange egg. This deter other butterflies from laying eggs on the same plant. Only the male butterfly has an orange tip to the cream wings.

Lady's Smock Also known as Cuckoo Flower. Commonly found in damp places along the Trail. The pale mauve flowers with four petals appear in spring. The green caterpillars of the Orange Tip butterfly feed mainly on the Cuckoo Flower.

Lords and Ladies Also known as Cuckoo Pint. Can be seen for most of the year in shaded areas. The leaves are arrow-shaped and glossy. The flower starts white, turns black then produces a cluster of green berries, which go bright orange-red in the autumn (poisonous).
